CORMAC McCARTHY THE ROAD

"His tale of survival and the miracle of goodness only adds to McCarthy's stature as a living master. It's gripping, frightening and, ultimately, beautiful. It might very well be the best book of the year, period."
—San Francisco Chronicle

Consider these questions:

- » How old do you think the boy is?
- » How long do the boy and his father walk south?
- » On page 52, McCarthy writes:
"The clocks stopped at 1:17. A long shear of light and then a series of low concussions."
What do you think happened to America?
- » Is this a post-apocalyptic tale of hope or despair?
